

THEIR SMILES CAPTURED $15,000 INDEMNITY FOR THE KIDDIES

The most beautifully decorated car of the day was owned by Mr. Herbert Staneland, 1984 Queen street east. The occupants, from left to right, were: Misses Bessie Maile, J. D. Couch, Mrs. Staneland, Mr. Staneland, Mrs. R. Kelley, Mrs. S. Jones and Miss Violet Contie.

Who could resist the charming appeals of pretty girls to buy roses to help consumptive children, particularly when Miss Armored Harris appealed.

Is it any wonder that this car of "roses," chaperoned by Mrs. J. H. Wickett, 35 Deer Park crescent, almost topped the list? From left to right they are: Miss Ethel Milnes, Mrs. Wickett, Misses R. Fries, Jessie Milnes and Helen Trimble.

The queenly serenity of Miss Marie O'Halloran was a money magnet at Carlton and Yonge.

Another carful—Mrs. Byfield, Misses Gladys Price, Babington, Betty Thompson, Mrs. W. E. Corlett, 26 Munro Park avenue, Miss Byfield sitting on the running board.

Miss Lillian MacBeth, at College and Yonge captured many dimes eager to be taken.

Unanimously awarded the beauty prize was this charming party from the east end: Mrs. C. H. Lafl, 34 Munro Park avenue, Misses Natalie Manson, Virginia Taylor, Mrs. F. Jones, Misses M. Brufbacher, Grace Price

They captured Exhibition visitors—Mrs. F. G. Borsh, 35 High Park boulevard, Misses Madeline Rogers, Sadie Hutchinson, Velma Crashley. On the running board, Mrs. A. N. Robertson, Miss Edna Lotz

A huge religious demonstration was held in Petrograd after the victory of the Russian fleet in Riga Gulf, and prayers of thanks were offered, as well as prayers for future victories. Photo shows crowds passing thru main street.

A respirator corps with the British army in Flanders.

The German ocean liners interned at Hoboken have been giving the American Federal authorities a lot of trouble. First they feared a sudden dash for freedom, and now an epidemic of cholera among the inhabitants of the steamers has necessitated extraordinary precautions.

Madame Poincaré waiting at the railroad station in Paris to receive a contingent of wounded. She has been an indefatigable worker since the outbreak of war.

Removing the old men, women and non-combatants from the French villages as the battle line changes with the French offensive is quite a problem for the Germans. Here is a party waiting to be removed to safety.

General Michel putting the badge of the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor on General Radiguet, in Moselles.

There is not a moment wasted in the delivery of letters and parcels to Tommy at the front. Photo shows arrival of a railway mail car at an outpost in France.

The famous Galata bridge at Constantinople, which was shelled and destroyed by a British submarine, which penetrated the harbor of the Turkish city. This photo gives a splendid view of the city.

A French anti-aircraft machine gun at work in the Argonne.

Hamilton is very proud of its finest residential street, Proctor boulevard, and rightly so, for there is not a finer avenue in Canada. The street is 80 feet wide and has flowers and fruit trees down the middle.

London is a busy place day and night these times. This picture shows a new battalion, wearing full strength, on parade in civilian clothes.

The rifle club and band belonging to Farmer and Company, one of the largest departmental stores in Sydney, N.S.W. men drill during work hours and are paid for so doing. This picture shows them marching past the store.

A remarkable photograph of Lord Kitchener and Premier Asquith at the front, being introduced by General Bridges, to General Durbell, commander of the 2nd Division of the Belgium army. The war lord seems to have unwillingly posed while this picture was being snapped.

"Fear not, till Birnam Wood do come to Dunsinane"—the Macbeth prophesy recalled by the painting of British motor ambulance tops to represent woods.

At Shuter and Yonge streets these young ladies, in their beautifully decorated Hudson car, gathered in dollars for the sick children on Queen Mary Day. They are, from the left, Grace Maddison, Mrs. Polson, Mrs. Cunningham, Mrs. Austin Suckling, Mrs. Nettlefield, 78 Farnham avenue.
